The Board of Trustees of Berkeley Heights Public Library is pleased to announce that BHPL will be re-opening on Saturday, May 5th at 9:00 am. Please stop in to see our new location, only one block from the Plainfield Avenue site.

This building had been a convent when Little Flower School was open and then served as the Rectory until December 2017. Only the first floor is available for public access and the collection is arranged in rooms along a central hall. The hallway is wide enough to accommodate the DVD collections for both children and adults, as well as the New Book shelves for adults. Public Internet computers are housed in the Reference Department, a laptop counter is located in a quieter room, and WiFi is available throughout the building. A new public copier is located near the front door, directly across from the Circulation Department.

The Children's Department is located down the hall and around the corner. The back hall is lined with shelves holding the J and YA collections. Picture books, early readers, non-fiction books, and the AWE reading readiness workstations are located in the Children's Room. We weren't able to bring the entire collection of stuffed animals and puzzles, but you will recognize a few old friends.

The total space may be smaller than 290 Plainfield Avenue, but the collections and a variety of seating have been arranged to maximize the available space. The Reference Department will offer the same services for in-person, telephone and email questions and tech assistance. The Children's Department will kick off story times on Tuesday, May 15th at 10:30 am with an appearance by the Good Tyme String Band. The Summer Reading Program will start as soon as school ends.

Stop in and take the grand tour.
